

Swiss Man's Prediction of 9.0 NW Earthquake Now Echoed by U.S. Scientists

Government officials in the designated areas urged to immediately create evacuation plans for the predicted resulting tsunami

Recent findings by scientific experts echo a prediction, from 2005, of a mammoth earthquake that will be centered in the Pacific Northwest. The prediction by Billy Meier, a 71-year old Swiss man with a remarkable, 58-year record of specific, accurate predictions, and the report from 2008 by Oregon State University scientists (<http://www.sciencedaily.com/releases/2008/08/080826124413.htm>) agree on the likelihood of an enormous natural disaster occurring. However, Meier's warning also specifically mentioned a gigantic tsunami that would produce unimaginably devastating consequences for residents of the Pacific coast.

On June 25, 2005, over three years before the OSU report was issued, Meier published the following warning, "According to our preview there will be a seaquake of 9 points on the Richter Scale in the region of the North Pacific not far from the American coast, from Portland to the south of California up to Washington in the north. As a result there will be a gigantic fault of several hundred kilometers, when as never before a seaquake-tsunami will spread in a ring form and produce immense devastation on the main land and on the islands, which will cost many human lives. The seaquake will last for about 5 minutes, to be followed by additional and less forceful quakes, which will trigger another but less severe tsunami. Some facts about this threatening danger are known to terrestrial scientists, but they are not capable of realizing the really/factually developing catastrophe."

OSU scientists don't foresee a tsunami and have a lower estimate of the magnitude of the quake than Meier. Neither they nor Meier gave a specific date for the predicted events. Even with advance warning and monitoring of natural disasters like hurricanes and tornadoes, the resulting damage and loss of life can be massive. But since the exact time, location and magnitude of earthquakes and tsunamis is rarely, if ever, precisely predicted, the resulting losses in life and property are often far more catastrophic.

It is incumbent upon all pertinent government agencies and officials in the designated areas to immediately create evacuation plans and to warn the population in the areas most at risk of the possibility of a tsunami, so that they can make their own escape plans for their families and themselves.

Coming Mega-catastrophe for the U.S.?

In early 2005, not long after the devastating Indian Ocean earthquake and tsunami, Meier received information from the Plejaren that there would be an eruption of the La Palma volcano in the Canary Islands that would produce a tsunami of unprecedented destructive force. They said that as horrific as the Asian tsunami was, it would be dwarfed in comparison by the devastation, especially to the residents of the east coast of the U.S., caused by the La Palma tsunami.

Meier was told that the tsunami's waves could reach several hundred meters in height and come in at supersonic speeds, penetrating as much as 12 miles inland – along the entire east coast of the U.S.

He was further informed that unless the U.S. government starts the long and necessary process to prepare for this certain to occur event, the death toll would be between 20-30 million Americans. Again, Meier was also told that terrestrial scientists are aware of the possible eruption but that they underestimate the magnitude of the accompanying destructive consequences. Once again, Meier didn't give a date for the La Palma event, which some scientists say could lie from years to centuries in the future. (See:

<http://www.newscientist.com/channel/earth/tsunami/dn1206>)

Some people have speculated that the La Palma tsunami could be the event referred to in this passage from the Henoch Prophecies (see: <http://theyfly.com/prophecies/prophecies.htm>):

“Even when the North American continent will be stricken by the most terrible catastrophe which has ever been recorded, evil military powers will wreak havoc with computerized and nuclear, biological and chemical weapons, whereby it will also happen that computerized weapons become independent and cannot be controlled any longer by human beings.”

The Controversial San Francisco Earthquake Photographs

It should come as no surprise that Meier also warned about a huge, future earthquake that would destroy San Francisco, as many others have also warned throughout the years.

But one of the most controversial aspects of the Meier case is his reported trip to the future to see – and photograph – an earthquake in the San Francisco area that does destroy the entire city. Details of the 11 photographs taken by Meier, and shown to the investigative team in 1978, revealed some details that may help to determine the approximate, if not exact, time of occurrence. (See:
<http://theyfly.com/news2005/november06/november06.htm#quake>)

Of particular interest were the automobiles that were observed in the photographs, especially since they were described as being much more rounded in shape than the cars of 1978, with more front window glass area and lacking in outside rear view mirrors, a technological development perhaps first shown in a

Mercedes-Benz concept car in 1996 (<http://www.snopes.com/photos/automobiles/newmercedes.asp>) and quite likely to appear in the near future. This element alone, when incorporated in production cars, could signal the approaching time of the foretold earthquake.

Again, the Plejaren refused to give a specific date or time for this (or any other predicted) event and, frustrating as that may be, the rationale given may have some validity. Such reasons for withholding specifics include that: most people will ignore the warnings, others will become extremely fearful and others would just blame the event on the ones who actually warned of it, accusing them of being some kind of demons, negative entities, or other imaginary beings from superstitious religious lore.

While people may disagree with the reasons why no further specifics are given, since terrestrial scientists do indeed consider the *NW and La Palma scenarios to be within the realm of possibility (and many see a large San Francisco earthquake also as highly likely) wisdom dictates that individuals and governments alike respond and take all possible precautionary measures.

Insanity of Offshore Drilling

As Meier had written in 1975

(<http://theyfly.com/products/products.htm#mssqvol1>) and in 1987 (<http://theyfly.com/prophecies/prophecies.htm>) the extraction of petroleum and natural gas are major contributors to the increased frequency and intensity of earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. While this is denied by various vested interests, who seek to extract the last drop of oil and wring the last possible dollar out of it, history will probably show how unbounded greed contributed to massive cataclysms and so-called “natural disasters”.

As time has, and will continue, to prove this to be true perhaps the folly of offshore drilling for oil will be realized.

Other Internet Stories of Impending Catastrophic Events

There are a number of different internet sites reporting and collecting data on rumors, premonitions and predictions of various large scale disasters and/or disruptions, such as at <http://www.arlingtoninstitute.org/>. There are also rumors pertaining to October 7, 2008, and various dates in November, which seem to indicate at least a certain restlessness in individual and collective psyches pertaining to the future.
