

Song Lyrics by Michael Horn

There Once Came a Race of Giants

from a distant war torn star looking for new worlds to conquer to spread power near and far

Protected by their loyal soldiers called guard angels cherubim the leaders soon established order for their new reign to begin

With their knowledge and their wisdom they did alter forms of life masters of the laws of science of their deeds would ancients write

That they took a wild human mixed in her celestial seed for one thousand generations we've misunderstood this deed

From this one many descended their days marked with pain and blood kingdoms came and kingdoms ended few survived deluge and flood

Other races same were fashioned or from stranded travelers grew starseed mixed through human passion sons of gods were formed anew

Above them all in a ship did hover one who called himself their lord demanding worship of no other with threats of vengeance he enforced

Over time the races scattered distant memories they preserved handed down through spoken legend and in books as holy word

Child of Love

There've been those throughout the ages who have come here to enslave us offering promises of power without love and though only love can save us it is looked for by the bravest inside of us as well as from above

When divided into nations we fell into desperation forgetting there has always been enough some believed their kind was better but the truth will stand forever each one of us is but a child of love

Child of love who is your mother do you recognize each one you see as part of your own family child of love sister and brother what will it take for you and me
to be loving one another

Now we're sailing to the threshold where the golden age will unfold and the stormy seas we sail will be rough but we're helping one another one with compass one with rudder on a ship of freedom called the child of love

I'll Be My Own Hero Words & Music

I was looking for somebody to believe in someone who'd save the day when things went wrong someone who'd live and die for all the things I only cry for someone who'd change my life change it with a song

I was looking for someone with all the answers someone who'd show me how to play the game and be stronger than the sadness all the anger and the madness oh how long can I hide the one I'm trying to find

I'll be my own hero I'll make my own magic I'll change the endings that used to be tragic I'll be all that I am without armor or mask I'll be my own hero my own hero at last

Now I don't need someone to come and save me and show me how my life's supposed to be I'll keep on taking chances finding my own answers love's the only savior
I will ever need

I'll be all I am I'll let love lead me on I'll be my own hero I'll sing my own song

Here's to Us

We who've searched so long and lonely for the strength to live life boldly while the world was telling us it didn't care many times we have been lied to been denied and even tried to end it all trapped in a moment in a moment of despair

Yes we who've bent beneath the pressure while we still unearthed the treasure with our last ounce of strength left we persevered with the wisdom born of patience and the blessings of creation we look back upon the hurdles all the hurdles we have cleared

Here's to us resting in each others arms here's to us taken high above all harm here's to us and the strength to carry on every day in every way forever sweetly dawning here's to us

So we say to all the others who have recently discovered the strength that they've been hiding through the years now there's more than just survival take joy in your arrival in a world that lives for love for love instead of fear
